The Fall of Citron

News/Release

As many of you know there has been much drama in the Citron scene over the past few days, much more so over the past 24 hours. This will be a complete guide to raise awareness of the situation for people who still have questions.

As many of you know about 5 days ago Citrons discord went private, unless you used an external verification app in the Switch homebrew of your modded switch.14,000 users less than 48 hours ago were purged and blacklisted from the Citron discord with no warning or reason given. Many of whom had already completed the verification steps with their modded switch. During the purge many moderators were purged aswell, and some moderators, specifically Greemdev, were very trigger happy to ban anyone who they wanted, just for fun. If you said anything they didn't like, or "annoyed" them, instant permaban. This was seen as immature and toxic, and helped escalate the ruin of Citron as a whole.

Many were skeptical of using this app because of the security concerns of handing over their Switches drm files to an unknown source for "verification" that you have broken Nintendos rules and modded your switch. Aswell as the power that someone would have with thousands of these people's specific switch identifiers. If gotten into the wrong hands (you know who) your switch could be bricked without warning. These fears would turn out to be justified in many regards apparently, In recent leaks from the Citron Mod channel Zephyron was planning in implementing a DRM locking feature that would make it so you could not use Citron unless you had externally verified that you had broken Nintendos terms of service, aswell as keeping a DATABASE of your Switch specific tokens and keys, making it so that even if you Uninstalled Citron you would be blacklisted from the app. This gives Zephyron too much power to pick and choose who gets to use the app aswell as creates large security concerns.

I am not involved in this drama whatsoever. None of these are firsthand accounts and there will be MANY missing things here, i am just an onlooker who thinks you guys need to know. But I will give to the best of my ability the many complains that have been raised.

Zephyron (the "lead developer" for Citron) have been found to be the same person from the Uzuy incident that used to be called Phoenix, many issues relating to them include a serious allegation of being a pedo, code stealing, harassing Jarrod (Sudachi emulator dev) and overall lying to the people backing up Uzuy. This led to the Sudachi dev leaving the scene in October of 2024 from harassment by Zephyron specifically or other people repeating the things Zephyron was saying(who was Phoenix at this point in time). So Zephyron abandoned Uzuy after it crashed and burned and relabeled himself as Zephyon, and Uzuy as Citron. Is will mention that the only reason these specific details are know is because Zephyron was not the lead developer for Uzuy either. Camille was. Again. So he was there the entire time doing all of the work with Zephyron/Phoenix taking the credit aswell. Camille also helped with the rebranding into Citron. Camille never had a problem with not being given credit for all of their work, they just wanted to help the community. Everything was fine until February of this year when Camille started engaging more with the community on their role with Citron and being more involved with the users actively around the time their Turnip Driver Biosensor was released, and recieved widely praised reviews on at the time. This cause Zepyron to act more hostile towards Camille feeling that the credit/attention was being taken from them.

Around this time Zephyron started making calls between the moderators when Camille was not online or behind his back in general, remember this was started between Zeph and Camille only as partners and now Zeph is making changes and communications specifically trying to hide them from Camille. Zeph started become more hostile towards Camille and lashed out or insulted Camille unwarranted on multiple occasions to make Camille look bad to other users or the moderators. This was directly after the release of 0.4 Citron which many consider to be the last truly stable build of Citron.

Zephyron release 0.5 without properly testing all of the new implimentations from Camille (and it shows, it broke allot of amd users experience aswell as didn't not show much progression vs 0.4 in general, usually regression) At this time Camille opened an account to receive donations for new hardware for testing. This is the straw that broke the camels back. Without communication Zephyron had hired a lawyer and sent a Cease and Desist to Camille, revoking all moderator privileges on Github and Discord until Camille took down their "Buy Me A Coffee" link for donations, aswell as unfriending them. (From my opinion Zeph was trying to kick out Camille anyways was just looking for an excuse) Camille hired a lawyer who communicated that the Cease and Desist had no grounds and that he had done nothing wrong. Zephyron apologized realizing they had no power, and instead sent 100$ to Camilles buy me a coffee as an apology and offering to lend/gift(not sure) them a ROG Ally Z1 Extreme to further testing of Citron. But there was a catch, they would only get the ROG Ally if they signed an NDA to become an Administrator in the channel again. Camille took this NDA to their lawyer who strongly reccomended against it. As it meant Camille could never speak about what is going on in Citron to anyone. Such as all of this. When Camille did not sign the NDA Zephyron reported Camilles buy me a coffee and got it shut down, aswell as their 100$ were refunded back them, and all previous donations. In this time Zeph released 0.6 and 0.61 without much help from Camille(the reason why they were broken and didn't help anyone except for the multiplayer that wasn't even developed by Zeph, just implemented copy and paste from someone else's code. Again.) Kleidis wrote the code for multiplayer and was not given the proper credit.

Citrons Github has been reset and all contributions from Camille have been removed. Do not expect a proper update anytime soon as all of the progress you guys have appreciated has been removed and I doubt the app even works anymore in its current github state. Zeph has unofficially said Citron is dead I beleive? But that is from word of mouth, I have not seen it.

All other stuff in this post has been verified by me and over 100 other people in many screenshot. This is not word of mouth. There is proof for every single thing mentioned so far.

RULES

1 Be kind and respectful to each other.

This will be the second emulator to crash and burn under Zeph/Phoenix's command.

Basically Camille and Zephyron started Citron together, and it was supposed to be a sort of partnership. But how it really worked was Camille did all of the work, and Zephron was the one to copy and paste the new code into Github. But Zephron took credit for all of the work, and would get upset if Camille was given credit by users for his work. There are many screenshot of Camille sending their work to Zeph and having them implement it, yet Camille was never given credit for it until Camille fought and fought for their credit on the Github.

Moving forward Camille will be releasing their own Switch fork soon with multiple other competent devs including the Uzuy and Yuzu Mod dev who had made tremendous strides in the Switch space, NONE of the new devs were involved in the Uzuy crash except who Camille who was the only reason Uzuy existed in the first place but had no control on how it was managed. I know it looks rough, at this exact moment but Switch emulation is not dead, far from it. And we have now cut all the wheat from the chaff and should be excited for the future ahead. The new fork will be called Eden and the discord will be up soon hopefully. I hope to all see you there.

This is not a hate post. Just here to bring awareness to the situation.

Fancy but also sounds complicated
Btw, how is firmware compatibility coming along?
Cause that's what I am mostly interested in if you start updating how the emulator handles keys firmware and qlauncher

Every "mod" in every platform, including this sewer called Reddit. I will never understand "people" who "moderate" this kind of stuff for free, it's literally incomprehensible

As someone who once moderated a pretty big forum once, for free, I'd say that you need to have some love for the thing, and plenty of free time, things that you usually can combine when you're young and jobless, that's why most mods around these plataforms are teenagers/young adults, who usually tend to powertrip

Revo_Int92 • 15h ago

I give you this, I only comment randomly on reddit (and youtube) for english practice, I guess some of these "mods" do the same, who knows. In the end, there are so many activities to kill time and actually improve X or Y skill, but I just fail to see the opportunistic side of working as a "mod" for random forums or even big companies... for free? Makes no goddamn sense. Reddit must earn a lot of money with ads, they should be responsible for moderating the "subs", not the "community", this is borderline abusive. Like Roblox taking advantage of child labor with zero legal repercussion, the "internet" mutated into something bizarre for community. some people don't find much of a sense of community in the real world, we are after all much more isolated than previous generations in comparison. I found my first communities online, until mid way thru high school when I found it irl.

Exactly, I used lots of forums back in the day, but the one I was a mod, I did so because it was one I felt part of it, and I wanted to keep it a safe space

Reita-Skeeta • 2h ago

I was the same. I mod one discord now, for a band my friends are in. It's mostly cause I know discord well enough and they are close friends. They do a lot of sneak peak announcements, give aways, etc... there, so I help coordinate. But it's also one of those hopefully becomes a paying thing as they continue to grow and I can tag along to run official socials for them if their label allows it.

LumpyArbuckleTV • 16h ago

They probably are.

helluvapain • 15h ago

yeah, usually the people who seek this type of position only do it for the powertrip, it's an unpaid job after all

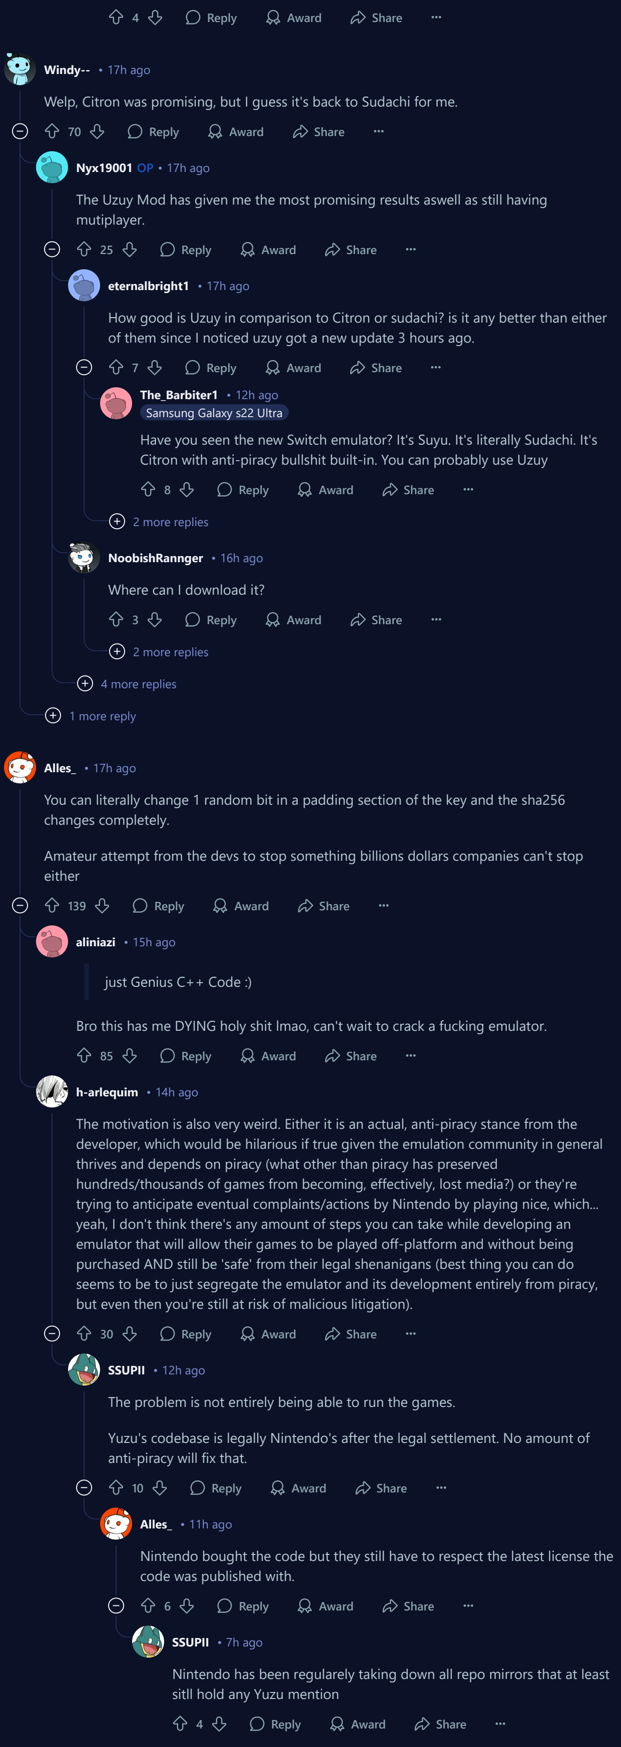
mikami677 • 8h ago

What is it about emulation that just seems to draw overly dramatic developers to it?

ReDEyeDz • 6h ago

People that are deep into programming and coding are very socially inept. More news at 7.



Windy-- • 17h ago

Welp, Citron was promising, but I guess it's back to Sudachi for me.

Nyx19001 OP • 17h ago

The Uzuy Mod has given me the most promising results aswell as still having mutiplayer.

eternalbright1 • 17h ago

How good is Uzuy in comparison to Citron or sudachi? is it any better than either of them since I noticed uzuy got a new update 3 hours ago.

The_Barbiter1 • 12h ago
Samsung Galaxy s22 Ultra

Have you seen the new Switch emulator? It's Suyu. It's literally Sudachi. It's Citron with anti-piracy bullshit built-in. You can probably use Uzuy

NoobishRannger • 16h ago

Where can I download it?

Alles_ • 17h ago

You can literally change 1 random bit in a padding section of the key and the sha256 changes completely.

Amateur attempt from the devs to stop something billions dollars companies can't stop either

aliniazi • 15h ago

> just Genius C++ Code :)

Bro this has me DYING holy shit lmao, can't wait to crack a fucking emulator.

h-arlequim • 14h ago

The motivation is also very weird. Either it is an actual, anti-piracy stance from the developer, which would be hilarious if true given the emulation community in general thrives and depends on piracy (what other than piracy has preserved hundreds/thousands of games from becoming, effectively, lost media?) or they're trying to anticipate eventual complaints/actions by Nintendo by playing nice, which... yeah, I don't think there's any amount of steps you can take while developing an emulator that will allow their games to be played off-platform and without being purchased AND still be 'safe' from their legal shenanigans (best thing you can do seems to be to just segregate the emulator and its development entirely from piracy, but even then you're still at risk of malicious litigation).

SSUPII • 12h ago

The problem is not entirely being able to run the games.

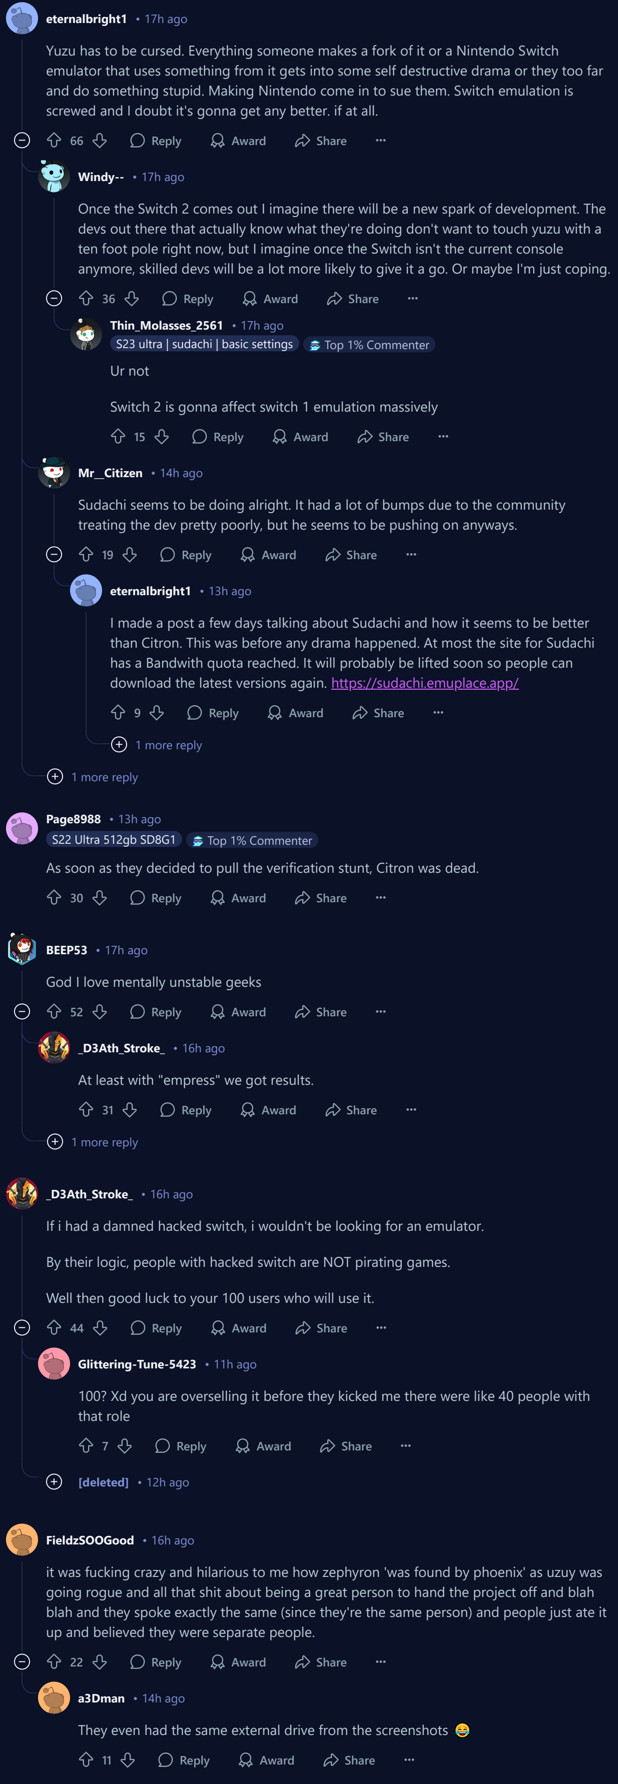
Yuzu's codebase is legally Nintendo's after the legal settlement. No amount of anti-piracy will fix that.

Alles_ • 11h ago

Nintendo bought the code but they still have to respect the latest license the code was published with.

SSUPII • 7h ago

Nintendo has been regularely taking down all repo mirrors that at least sitll hold any Yuzu mention



eternalbright1 • 17h ago

Yuzu has to be cursed. Everything someone makes a fork of it or a Nintendo Switch emulator that uses something from it gets into some self destructive drama or they too far and do something stupid. Making Nintendo come in to sue them. Switch emulation is screwed and I doubt it's gonna get any better. if at all.

Windy-- • 17h ago

Once the Switch 2 comes out I imagine there will be a new spark of development. The devs out there that actually know what they're doing don't want to touch yuzu with a ten foot pole right now, but I imagine once the Switch isn't the current console anymore, skilled devs will be a lot more likely to give it a go. Or maybe I'm just coping.

Ur not

Switch 2 is gonna affect switch 1 emulation massively

Mr_Citizen • 14h ago

Sudachi seems to be doing alright. It had a lot of bumps due to the community treating the dev pretty poorly, but he seems to be pushing on anyways.

eternalbright1 • 13h ago

I made a post a few days talking about Sudachi and how it seems to be better than Citron. This was before any drama happened. At most the site for Sudachi has a Bandwith quota reached. It will probably be lifted soon so people can download the latest versions again. https://sudachi.emuplace.app/

At least with "empress" we got results.

_D3Ath_Stroke_ • 16h ago

If i had a damned hacked switch, i wouldn't be looking for an emulator.

By their logic, people with hacked switch are NOT pirating games.

Well then good luck to your 100 users who will use it.

100? Xd you are overselling it before they kicked me there were like 40 people with that role

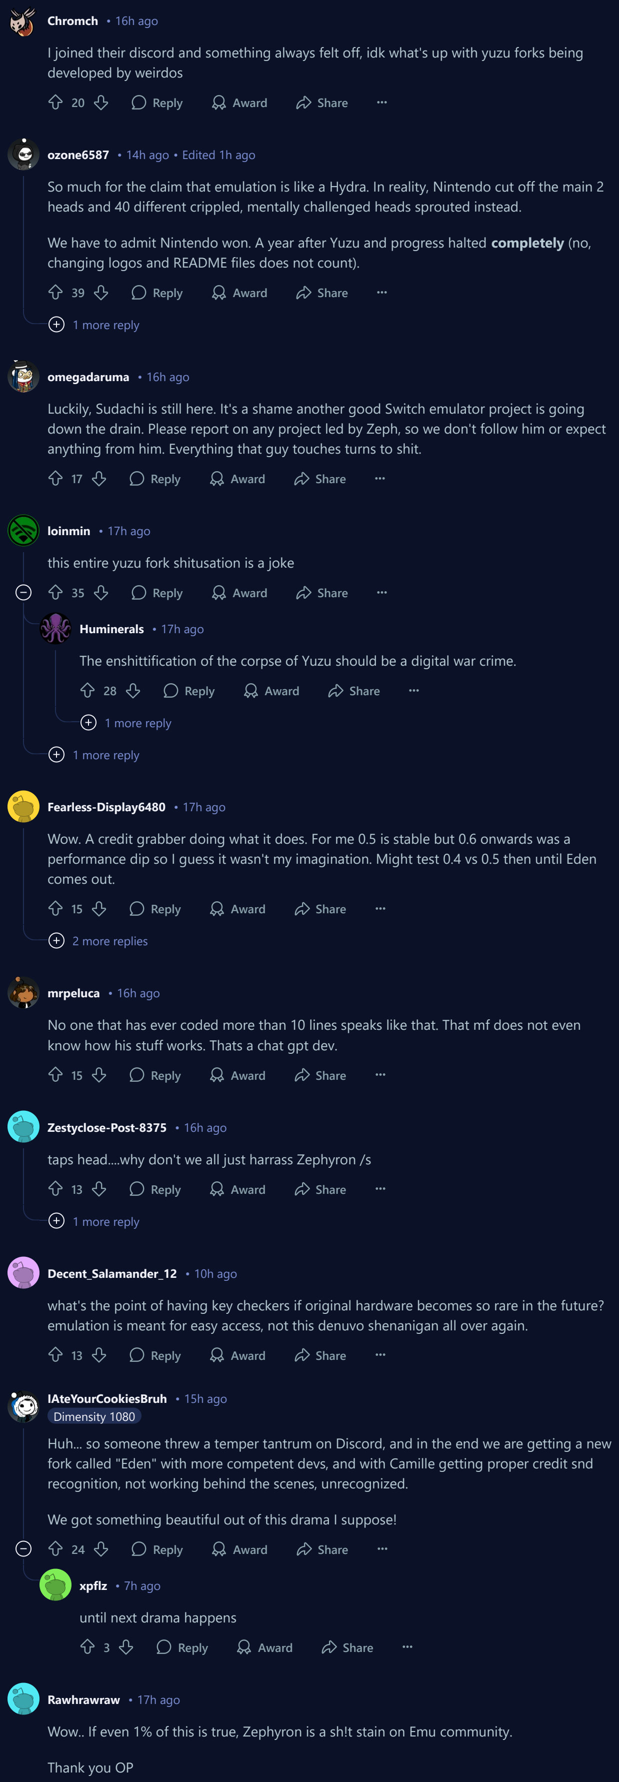
FieldzSOOGood • 16h ago

it was fucking crazy and hilarious to me how zephyron 'was found by phoenix' as uzuy was going rogue and all that shit about being a great person to hand the project off and blah blah and they spoke exactly the same (since they're the same person) and people just ate it up and believed they were separate people.

a3Dman • 14h ago

They even had the same external drive from the screenshots 😂



Chromch • 16h ago

I joined their discord and something always felt off, idk what's up with yuzu forks being developed by weirdos

ozone6587 • 14h ago • Edited 1h ago

So much for the claim that emulation is like a Hydra. In reality, Nintendo cut off the main 2 heads and 40 different crippled, mentally challenged heads sprouted instead.

We have to admit Nintendo won. A year after Yuzu and progress halted completely (no, changing logos and README files does not count).

omegadaruma • 16h ago

Luckily, Sudachi is still here. It's a shame another good Switch emulator project is going down the drain. Please report on any project led by Zeph, so we don't follow him or expect anything from him. Everything that guy touches turns to shit.

loinmin • 17h ago

this entire yuzu fork shitusation is a joke

Huminerals • 17h ago

The enshittification of the corpse of Yuzu should be a digital war crime.

Fearless-Display6480 • 17h ago

Wow. A credit grabber doing what it does. For me 0.5 is stable but 0.6 onwards was a performance dip so I guess it wasn't my imagination. Might test 0.4 vs 0.5 then until Eden comes out.

mrpeluca • 16h ago

No one that has ever coded more than 10 lines speaks like that. That mf does not even know how his stuff works. Thats a chat gpt dev.

Zestyclose-Post-8375 • 16h ago

taps head....why don't we all just harrass Zephyron /s

Decent_Salamander_12 • 10h ago

what's the point of having key checkers if original hardware becomes so rare in the future? emulation is meant for easy access, not this denuvo shenanigan all over again.

IAteYourCookiesBruh • 15h ago
Dimensity 1080

Huh... so someone threw a temper tantrum on Discord, and in the end we are getting a new fork called "Eden" with more competent devs, and with Camille getting proper credit snd recognition, not working behind the scenes, unrecognized.

We got something beautiful out of this drama I suppose!

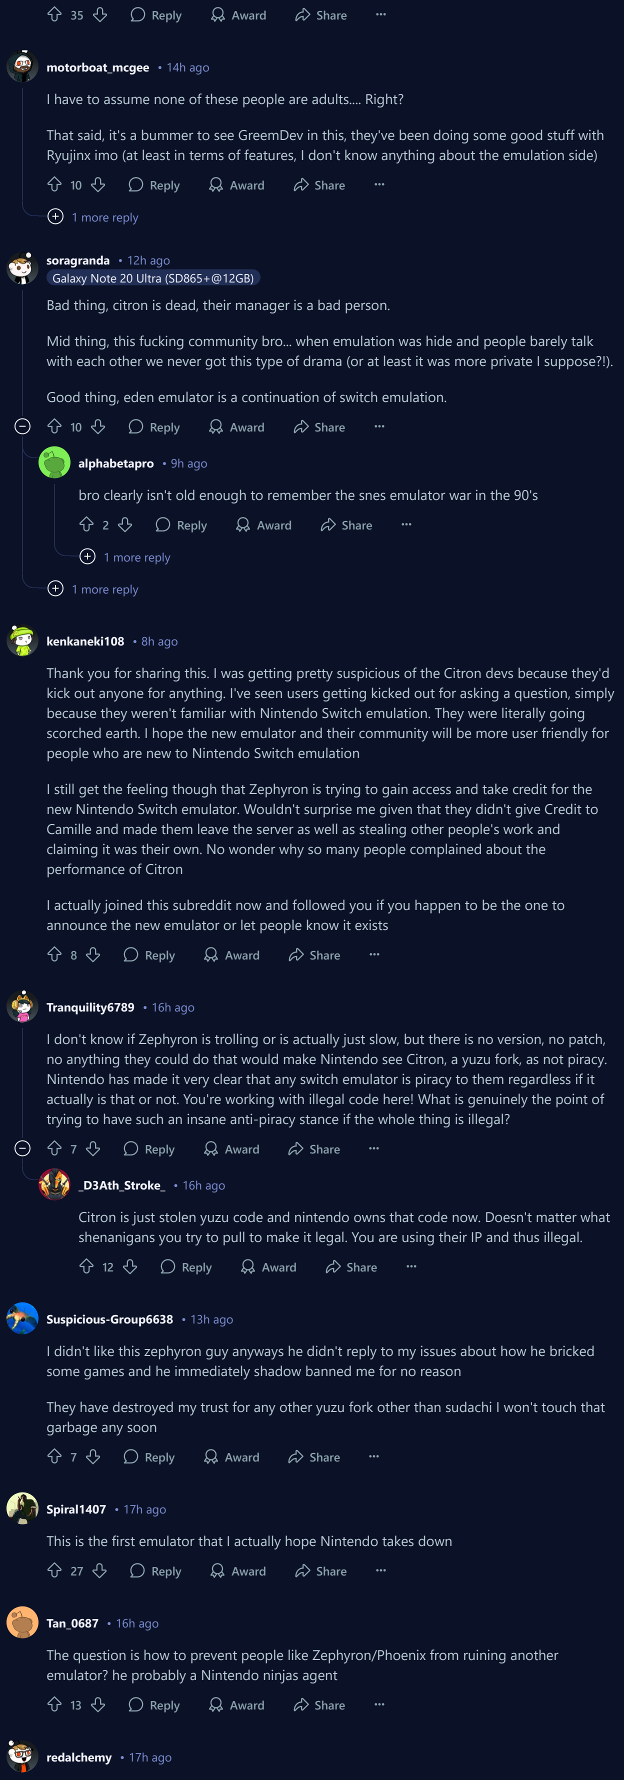
xpflz • 7h ago

until next drama happens

Rawhrawraw • 17h ago

Wow.. If even 1% of this is true, Zephyron is a sh!t stain on Emu community.

Thank you OP



motorboat_mcgee • 14h ago

I have to assume none of these people are adults.... Right?

That said, it's a bummer to see GreemDev in this, they've been doing some good stuff with Ryujinx imo (at least in terms of features, I don't know anything about the emulation side)

soragranda • 12h ago
Galaxy Note 20 Ultra (SD865+@12GB)

Bad thing, citron is dead, their manager is a bad person.

Mid thing, this fucking community bro... when emulation was hide and people barely talk with each other we never got this type of drama (or at least it was more private I suppose?!).

Good thing, eden emulator is a continuation of switch emulation.

alphabetapro • 9h ago

bro clearly isn't old enough to remember the snes emulator war in the 90's

kenkaneki108 • 8h ago

Thank you for sharing this. I was getting pretty suspicious of the Citron devs because they'd kick out anyone for anything. I've seen users getting kicked out for asking a question, simply because they weren't familiar with Nintendo Switch emulation. They were literally going scorched earth. I hope the new emulator and their community will be more user friendly for people who are new to Nintendo Switch emulation

I still get the feeling though that Zephyron is trying to gain access and take credit for the new Nintendo Switch emulator. Wouldn't surprise me given that they didn't give Credit to Camille and made them leave the server as well as stealing other people's work and claiming it was their own. No wonder why so many people complained about the performance of Citron

I actually joined this subreddit now and followed you if you happen to be the one to announce the new emulator or let people know it exists

Tranquility6789 • 16h ago

I don't know if Zephyron is trolling or is actually just slow, but there is no version, no patch, no anything they could do that would make Nintendo see Citron, a yuzu fork, as not piracy. Nintendo has made it very clear that any switch emulator is piracy to them regardless if it actually is that or not. You're working with illegal code here! What is genuinely the point of trying to have such an insane anti-piracy stance if the whole thing is illegal?

_D3Ath_Stroke_ • 16h ago

Citron is just stolen yuzu code and nintendo owns that code now. Doesn't matter what shenanigans you try to pull to make it legal. You are using their IP and thus illegal.

Suspicious-Group6638 • 13h ago

I didn't like this zephyron guy anyways he didn't reply to my issues about how he bricked some games and he immediately shadow banned me for no reason

They have destroyed my trust for any other yuzu fork other than sudachi I won't touch that garbage any soon

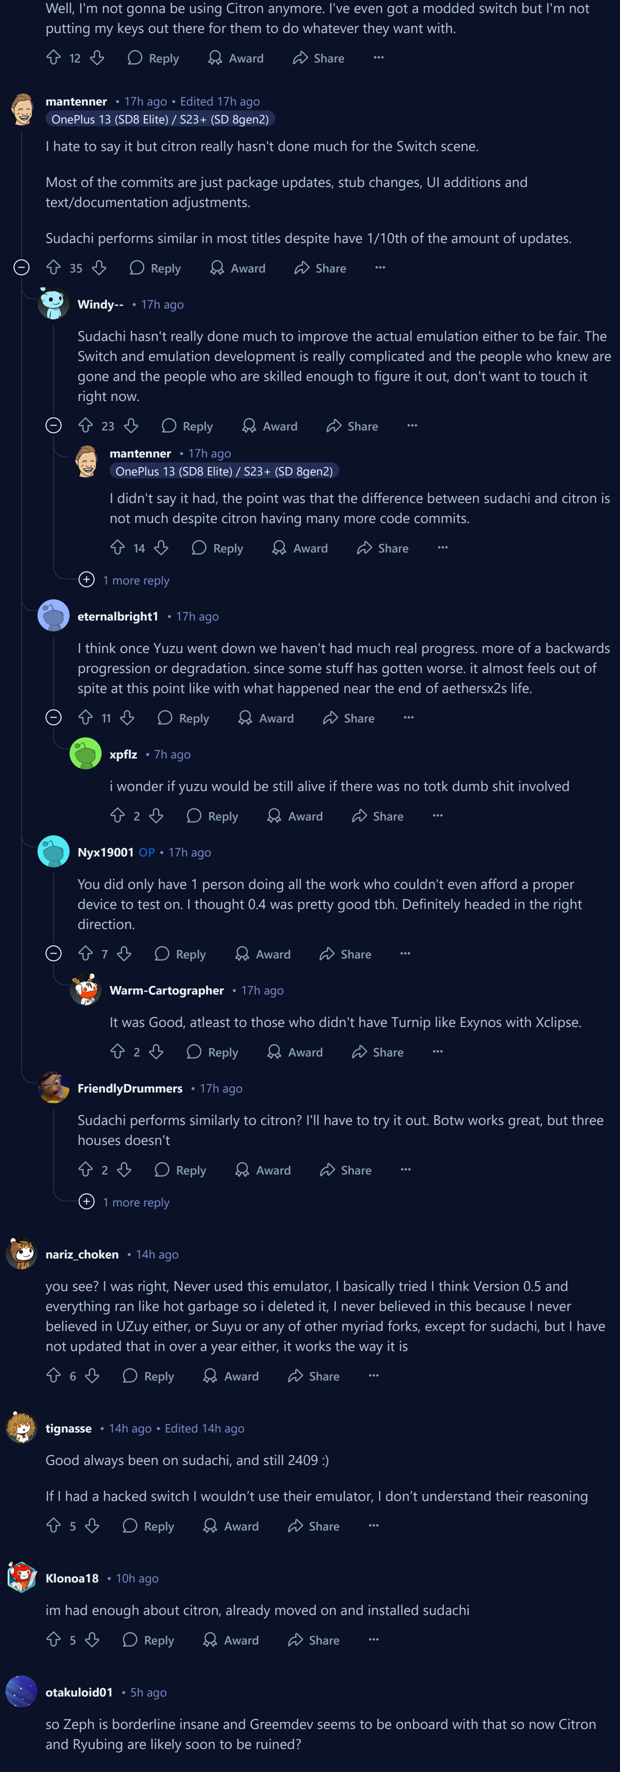
Spiral1407 • 17h ago

This is the first emulator that I actually hope Nintendo takes down

Tan_0687 • 16h ago

The question is how to prevent people like Zephyron/Phoenix from ruining another emulator? he probably a Nintendo ninjas agent

redalchemy • 17h ago



Well, I'm not gonna be using Citron anymore. I've even got a modded switch but I'm not putting my keys out there for them to do whatever they want with.

OnePlus 13 (SD8 Elite) / S23+ (SD 8gen2)

I hate to say it but citron really hasn't done much for the Switch scene.

Most of the commits are just package updates, stub changes, UI additions and text/documentation adjustments.

Sudachi performs similar in most titles despite have 1/10th of the amount of updates.

Windy-- • 17h ago

Sudachi hasn't really done much to improve the actual emulation either to be fair. The Switch and emulation development is really complicated and the people who knew are gone and the people who are skilled enough to figure it out, don't want to touch it right now.

mantenner • 17h ago
OnePlus 13 (SD8 Elite) / S23+ (SD 8gen2)

I didn't say it had, the point was that the difference between sudachi and citron is not much despite citron having many more code commits.

eternalbright1 • 17h ago

I think once Yuzu went down we haven't had much real progress. more of a backwards progression or degradation. since some stuff has gotten worse. it almost feels out of spite at this point like with what happened near the end of aethersx2s life.

xpflz • 7h ago

i wonder if yuzu would be still alive if there was no totk dumb shit involved

Nyx19001 OP • 17h ago

You did only have 1 person doing all the work who couldn't even afford a proper device to test on. I thought 0.4 was pretty good tbh. Definitely headed in the right direction.

Warm-Cartographer • 17h ago

It was Good, atleast to those who didn't have Turnip like Exynos with Xclipse.

FriendlyDrummers • 17h ago

Sudachi performs similarly to citron? I'll have to try it out. Botw works great, but three houses doesn't

nariz_choken • 14h ago

you see? I was right, Never used this emulator, I basically tried I think Version 0.5 and everything ran like hot garbage so i deleted it, I never believed in this because I never believed in UZuy either, or Suyu or any of other myriad forks, except for sudachi, but I have not updated that in over a year either, it works the way it is tignasse • 14h ago • Edited 14h ago

Good always been on sudachi, and still 2409 :)

If I had a hacked switch I wouldn't use their emulator, I don't understand their reasoning

so Zeph is borderline insane and Greemdev seems to be onboard with that so now Citron and Ryubing are likely soon to be ruined?

As a Software Developer, I'm so tired of this shit. I feel like 50% of all developers have 1/3 of a brain. We've seen this Discord+Github formula fail so many times that i'm impressed people keep repeating it. Just create a private local git server and send updates to people trough a website. They're more interested in "fame" and attention than making good software. They act like teenagers, creating drama out of anything and sabotaging themselves over dumb shit. At least we still have some projects with serious and talented people who know what they're doing.

Because there was mention of tpm, i dont like idea of tpm or secure boot check in nintendo switch emulator, if they wont stop or wont go back i guess citron bouta fall down for real (if i said someting incorrectly or smth else tell me, i like feedback to improve on things)

Via TL;DR site

> The post discusses the recent drama and issues surrounding the Citron emulator for the Nintendo Switch. Citron was a promising emulator, but it has faced several problems, including the removal of contributions from a developer named Camille, the release of unstable updates, and concerns over security and privacy due to Citron's DRM features. The post also mentions that the lead developer, Zephyron, has a history of controversies and allegations, including being involved in the Uzuy incident. As a result, Camille is now working on a new emulator called Eden, which will be developed with the help of other competent developers. The post emphasizes that Switch emulation is not dead and that the community is moving forward by cutting out the "chaff."
